PROGRAM OVERVIEW:

Health care and public health preparedness has been integrated with core national response capabilities since 2002. Most people don't consider what they have learned from their own drills and exercises, but more importantly, real-life events, and how capabilities have been used to improve their facility's response.

In this session, we'll discuss emergency preparedness response capabilities most relevant to past healthcare experiences including responding within the National Emergency Response capability framework; how to document valuable data and key information learned into an After-Action Report; incorporate Lessons Learned in planning the next drill and exercise to make it facility specific and pertinent. The goal is to ensure ongoing safety for the staff and residents in your building.

OUR SPEAKER:

MS. PATRICIA ANDERS, M.S., MEP is the Manager of Health Emergency Preparedness Exercises. She has been with the Office of Health Emergency Preparedness for 17 years full-time, and three years prior to that part-time, while serving as the Training Director in the New York State Department of Health's public health laboratories. She is responsible for preparedness exercises and integrating federal directives for exercises for the New York State Department of Health, including HSEEP compliance and NIMS. For 11 years prior to focusing on exercises, she was responsible for coordinating emergency response training and education programs statewide for public health and healthcare staff. Ms. Anders also serves as an educator for a variety of preparedness topics, including the Homeland Security Exercise and Evaluation Program (HSEEP), and Psychological First Aid.

Ms. Anders received her M.S. in Education and her B.S. in Psychology from The Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. She is also a certified Master Exercise Practitioner.
